FALSE REPORT ABOUT HORSEMAN

Report that the Well Known Driver of Buttonwood Stock Farm Me with Foul Play in Canada is Incorrect.

Word was received here Sunday that David H. Kelly had met with foul play in Canada, and a request was made that his relatives living in Salem N. J. come on at once.

Mr. Kelly is a horseman of wide reputation and for several years has been driving and training the horses at the Buttonwood Stock Farm. He left the first part of August with a number of fast horses to enter the Grand Circuit, the last word from him and the latest in formation concerning his whereabouts after he arrived in Buffalo, a week or more ago.

His brother, Frank H. Kelly, a trainer, arrived in town Saturday night and left for Baltimore Sunday to have an investigation made of the report. Mr. Butt received a telegram this morning from Mr. Kelly who is now at Leedsville, Mass., saying that he is in good health and is making preparations to enter the circuit.

MARRIED IN FEBRUARY

Miss Adah Miller the well known and most obliging telephone operator, of Biglerville, sprung a very agreeable surprise upon the inhabitants of that town and vicinity, when she announced her marriage to Edward Sachs, of near Bonneauville.

Mrs. Sachs, formerly Miss Miller, is undoubtedly an exception to the old established rule, and the strange part about it is that she has violated, the sacred rights, by keeping her marriage a secret. No one in Biglerville, strange to say, knew anything about it not even "Bill" Kapp, and Mrs. Sachs declares that she has been married since last February.

The bride and groom have left on an extended tour, to Baltimore, Washington, and Atlantic City. They will not return until about September 15th to make their residence in Biglerville.

RUNAWAY

Just a few minutes before the 8.05 train arrived over the W. M. this morning the big gray horse belonging to Mrs. J. O. Blocher became frightened at the rattling of some boards in the delivery wagon and started on the run out Carlisle street. The runaway passed the entire line of carriages waiting for the train, without doing any damage other than knocking down one of the horses hitched to the Pitzer House bus. Harry Leech the driver leaped from the wagon, before it got under headway and escaped uninjured.

The horse created a great deal of excitement by performing his feat without doing material damage and crossing the track just in front of the approaching train.

TRUMPETER ACQUITTED

Serious Charge Against Trooper of 15th Cavalry Ignored by Grand Jury. Will leave for Fort Myer this Afternoon.

The indictment against Trumpeter Fred Kitchen of Fort Meyer, Va., was this day ignored by the Grand Jury, and upon motion by his counsel, William Hersh, Esq. the defendant was discharged from custody.

District Attorney Neely stated to the Court that after conferring with the prosecutrix, he was satisfied that the Commonwealth could not sustain the charge, and in addition, informed the Court that the girl had "skipped" the jurisdiction, although regularly subpoenaed to be in attendance at court.

BASE BALL

On Saturday August 21 the best exhibition of baseball ever seen at Fairfield was played by the local nine versus Abbotstown. They came "fixed" to win and they only failed because of the phenomenal all round work of pitcher Swope and the timely batting and fielding of the locals. The closeness of the battle is shown by the score—3-1 and of the four runs made by the two teams only one was earned. It was a pitchers battle between Swope for the locals and Miller for the visitors, with the odds in favor of Swope, who in the nine innings the visitors were at bat allowed but two hits in as many innings and giving but one free pass to first.

Miller for the visitors allowed only six hits, but was unfortunate in having three of them bunched in the third inning, which together with a hit batsman and an error produced the three and only runs made by the locals. The visitors secured three lone tally in the first inning which was the result of an error which gave Berry a life at first followed by a two base hit by Miller on which Berry scored.

The features of the game were the all round work of Swope and the timely hitting of Topper and O'Brien. Swope secured two of the locals six hits one was a three bagger, by which he practically won his own game. Not only on the slab and at bat was the local twirler good, but his fielding was also very classy, he accepting seven chances.

The excellent quality of ball put up by the both teams is evidenced by the time, one hour and fifteen minutes, taken to play the game. The local nine will play a return game at Abbotstown on Saturday, August 28.

ROSE FOR GRAVE OF LEFT LEG

Lenox Mass., Aug 20.—In pursuance of a custom that has come to be almost a solemn rite, Major George Tate, U. S. A. retired, has left here to make his annual visit to the grave of his left leg, which, shot off in action, is buried on the battle field at Gettysburg.

Major Tate, who is now an Internal Revenue officer attached to the New York district, served through the war with signal honor and distinction until his leg was shot off at Gettysburg. When told that he must lose the member, after the battle, he made arrangements to have it buried on the battlefield. A stone, subsequently erected, now marks the grave of the gallant Major's leg.

Since then not a year has passed that Major Tate, no matter how pressing his duties, has not gone to Gettysburg to lay a red rose on the grave of a his lost member.

HARVEST OF THE REAPER

Those who Have Passed From Our Midst and the Reaper of Death Ceases Only to Mark their Parting.

CHAS. ZEPHANIAH TAWNEY

A veteran answering the final call to mortal man, passed peacefully from the shadows of this life, into the realms beyond the "Great Divide", on Sunday morning at fifteen minutes after seven.

About four weeks ago Mr. Tawney was taken with a paralytic stroke, from which he never recovered. He lost control of the left side of his body and fell into a decline, which gradually resulted in total paralysis.

Mr. Tawney was a veteran of the Civil War. The type of man, who answered the call of his country, in defense of the ever memorable cause, that brought to an issue and determined the destiny of a nation. He served two enlistments and leaves a brilliant War record behind, being a member of the invincible Pennsylvania Reserves. Slowly the Fates unravel the threads of Destiny, and quickly the Eternal Harvester records each event as past. What was once revived as the "Grand Union Army, of the Republic is now but a shattered remnant, marking one of the worlds greatest events.

Mr. Tawney was aged 78 years, 6 months, and 22 days and is survived by his wife, three brothers: Jeremiah of Mechanicsburg; John, of Monterey; Perry of Gettysburg; and five children: James Tawney, of Philadelphia; Mrs. Hixcox of Norwich, Conn.; and Mrs. Tate, and Augustus, and William Tawney of Gettysburg. The funeral services will be held at Mrs. Tate's home on East Middle St., Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Interment in the Evergreen Cemetery.

BASEBALL

York Springs baseball team defeated the Mt. Holly Springs team on Saturday 13-1. Mt. Holly never had a look in during the entire game, the one lone tally being scored for them on a bad throw in the second inning.

Dr. McCarriar pitched for York Springs, and held the visitors down to three hits, striking out 14 men and retiring the whole side on strikes in the 3rd inning.

Noggle who pitched for Mt. Holly was touched up for 16 hits, and struck out 6 men.

Pearson and Cook were the batting stars for York Springs, each getting 4 hits out of 4 times up. Score York Springs—13, Mt. Holly—1.

FIVE KILLED IN STRIKE RIOT

Trooper, Deputy Sheriff and Three Foreigners Slain.

TEN ARE FATALLY INJURED

Bloodshed Follows Attempt to Storm Stockade at Pressed Steel Car Works at Schoenville, Pa. — State Troopers Fire on Mob.

Pittsburg, Aug. 23.—One state trooper, one deputy sheriff and three foreigners were shot and killed in a wild riot at the Pressed Steel Car plant in Schoenville, where employees are now on strike. At least a score of persons were seriously wounded, ten fatally. The rioting followed a day of quiet, and broke out without warning.

The following partial list of dead and injured was made up from reports received from the morgue, hospitals and several physicians' offices:
The dead—John L. Williams, state trooper; Harry Exler, deputy sheriff; three foreigners.
Fatally injured — John C. Smith, state trooper; Lucillas Jones, state trooper; seven foreigners. George Kitch and John O'Donnell, state troopers, were seriously injured, and one woman was shot in the neck.

Scores Arrested.
Over a score of persons received more or less serious injuries.

The riot scene was practically indescribable. Mounted troopers galloped indiscriminately through the streets with riot maces drawn, cracking the heads of all persons loitering in the vicinity of the mill. Deputy sheriffs and troopers broke in the doors of houses suspected of being the retreat of strikers, and wholesale arrests were made. Scores of persons were arrested and placed in box car jails in the mill yards.

During the early stages of the rioting women were conspicuous. Some of them were armed, others effectively used clubs and stones. These women, all foreigners, insane with rage, were mainly responsible for inciting the men to extreme measures.
The mob without warning made a concerted attack upon the big, swinging gates of the stockade. In the melee Harry Exler, a deputy sheriff, was shot and instantly killed by a bullet fired by an alleged strike sympathizer. In an effort to arrest a man picked out of the crowd as the one who did the shooting, State Trooper Williams was instantly killed by a revolver bullet. Two other troopers on foot were also shot, falling into the arms of their comrades.

For the first time since the inception of the strike the state troopers then opened volley fire on the mob. Six strikers fell at the first round. Three of them are reported fatally shot.
Rioters Attack Ambulances.
As an ambulance made its way from the car plant to the hospital, carrying wounded troopers, the vehicle was attacked and the driver forced to flee for his life. The frightened team of horses attached to the ambulance plunged wildly in and about the road. Two men were trampled under the horses' hoofs. The ambulance was finally driven to the hospital by a detachment of troopers.
Sheriff Gumbert, at the county jail, called for fifty men to serve as deputies at the strike scene.
The Ohio Valley hospital has treated ten injured, three of which are reported fatal.

AVIATION WEEK AT RHEIMS

Wright Aeroplanes Carry Off Honors on First Day.

Rheims, France, Aug. 23.—The spectacle of six aeroplanes simultaneously flying in huge circles over the plain at Betheny was a remarkable feature of the opening day of aviation week. At the finish of the flight there was a great burst of cheers over this wonderfully impressive exhibition of man's mastery of the air.

Only Lefebvre, with a Wright bi-plane; Blieriot, Delagrang, Esnault-Pelterie and Captain Ferber braved the gusty puffs. Lefebvre alone succeeded in negotiating the complete circuit of the course. He remained in the air for sixteen minutes in a twenty-five mile wind, breaking the speed record heretofore held by Lissandier, covering ten kilometres in 8 minutes 55.45 seconds.

Latham came down after finishing the second round, the others gradually dropping out until only three Wright machines remained aloft. Lambert completed four, Lefebvre and Tissandier three circuits each.

The Wright aeroplanes alone completed the required three rounds, the time being as follows: Tissandier, 28 minutes 59 seconds; Lambert, 29 minutes 2 seconds. The other machines made records only in the speed lap contest.

HIS ILLUSTRATION, CURE FOR THE "LAZY" DISEASE

By ELIZA WHITFIELD.
[Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.]

"The reason," said the old bachelor to his fiancée, the old maid, "why you women never rise to the management of a big business concern is because you haven't mental discrimination between correct and incorrect methods."

"Nonsense!" retorted the old maid. "A woman can discriminate between correct and incorrect methods as well as a man. And she's as capable of managing a big business as men generally are. Of course, so long as men keep making typewriters and petty clerks of women, giving the important positions to their own sex, she'll never learn the business and can never rise to a head position."

"Why do men keep women in the subordinate positions?"

"Because they can get them to work cheaper."

"And why will they work cheaper?"

"Why, because they have to, I suppose."

"The reductio ad absurdum."

"What do you mean by that gibberish?"

"Your argument is reduced to an absurdity. But I'll not agree with you; a woman, not having a logical mind, can't."

"I wish you to understand that I have just as logical a mind as you."

"Your own words prove that you have not. I would never use an assertion in place of an argument. I'll illustrate rather than argue with you. Not long ago a certain lady received from a certain firm, who were large importers, a handsome rug with a bill for it of $150. A polite note accompanied the goods, requesting that if the rug was not accepted she would return it."

"The old maid looked surprised, and the old bachelor proceeded."

"The lady wrote indignantly to the firm that had sent her the rug, asking to know what right they had to expect her to return a rug she had not ordered. She would be obliged to call in a cartman and pay him for taking it back. She was a very busy woman besides."

"The old maid drew away haughtily."

"How did you come to know of this matter?" she asked.

"That hasn't anything to do with the illustration."

"I don't wish the illustration."

"You haven't heard the whole of it."

"I know all I care to know. The head of the firm sent for the rug and took it away, at the same time writing me an impertinent note saying that he would be obliged if I would send for the dozen tickets I had sent him for our charity ball."

"What else?"

"That he had not asked for them."

"What else?"

"He must pay a messenger. That wasn't necessary at all. Hadn't he plenty of stamps?"

"Stamps cost money."

"A man must be very mean to grudge a few stamps in a matter of charity."

"It is his right to dispense every cent of his charitable fund as he pleases. Besides, he was called upon to return other tickets."

"There was some game in the matter. I didn't send the man any tickets. I sent some to you."

"And I sent you the money."

"How did this—this esteemed friend of yours get the tickets?"

"They were mine."

"I see it all. It was a mean, contemptible trick."

"But a good illustration of the absence in common of that power of discrimination."

"I shall not trouble you again in my charitable work. I'll confine myself to men more."

"Liberal? Didn't I send you the money for the tickets?"

"But you took it upon yourself to—"

"Teach you a lesson. Was that unkind? How many men do you suppose muttered curses upon you for your method of procedure?"

"I can stand their curses so long as I got their money for the poor."

"In that one statement of yours is involved a question which no brain, masculine or feminine, is capable of solving; that is what is excusable in providing for suffering people. Only one thing I ask of you: When you send out charity tickets again consider yourself a merchant soliciting trade."

"And do what?"

"First raise the money to send stamped envelopes for the return of the tickets."

"That's not so easy."

"It's very simple, indeed. Call on me."

There was silence between the couple, during which the old maid was evidently absorbed in thought. The old bachelor looked for a surrender.

He had not shown her her fault by argument; he had taken the pains to give her a practical illustration. He believed that when they were married he would always by such means convince her of any error she might fall into. At last the old maid said:

"It's very kind of you to offer to furnish me with stamped envelopes in which the tickets that are not accepted may be returned, but I don't want them. If I gave every man to whom I send tickets an envelope in which he could easily slip them, seal it and drop it in the mail I would not sell nearly so many tickets. You men are impracticable creatures."

There was another pause. This time the old bachelor did the thinking. At last he said:

"The air is chilly. I think it is going to rain."

First Got Rid of Parasite, Advises Dr. Stiles.

THEN TREAT THE PATIENT

Chief of Marine Hospital Service Service Gives Advice For Treating the Hook-Worm Disease, and Warns Against Excessive Use of Thymol.

Washington, Aug. 23.—"First get rid of the parasite causing the 'hook-worm' disease, then direct attention to treating the patient afflicted with the malady."

This is the advice given to physicians and others for the treatment of the so-called "lazy" disease by Dr. Charles Wardell Stiles, chief of the division of zoology, hygienic laboratory, public health and marine hospital service, in the issue of the bulletin of that service. He shows the mistake of first treating the patient and afterwards the parasite.

For several years Dr. Stiles has devoted practically all of his attention to investigating the hook-worm disease, particularly as affecting the southern states, where it was found to be quite prevalent. He ascertained that the disease produced anemia in those so affected, causing an inability to perform any kind of work and resulting in many instances in a slow death.

Showing that although the "hook-worm" disease may occur in persons in any walk of life, Dr. Stiles declares that it is particularly among the poorer classes that it occurs and that the average "hook-worm" patient cannot afford to lose several days' wages to undergo treatment. It is, therefore, he says, frequently expedient to conduct the treatment Saturday evening and Sunday morning.

"Notwithstanding that primarily we are to treat the parasite, not the patient," says Dr. Stiles, "it should be remembered that if too great a quantity of thymol is absorbed by the patient and the patient's family should be carefully warned not to permit the patient under any circumstances to have on the Sunday during which the treatment is given any food or drink containing alcohol, fats or oil. Patent medicines should be mentioned in particular, because of the alcohol many of them contain, and even milk and butter should be forbidden."

Dr. Stiles then cites a case of serious thymol poisoning following the taking of a copious drink of milk the day thymol was taken.

A POLITE HIGHWAYMAN

"Pardon Me, I Am Going to Rob You," He Said to Woman.

Newark, N. J., Aug. 23.—"Pardon me, I am going to rob you," remarked a polite highwayman as he caught up with Miss Charlotte M. Hamilton, of 239 South Eleventh street, East Orange, N. J., when she was within a few steps of her home.

The frightened young woman began to scream, when the stranger clapped his hand over her mouth, saying: "Don't holler and I won't be rough. I want all you've got; don't make an outcry and I won't harm you at all."

Knocking her down, the highwayman proceeded to relieve Miss Hamilton of her jewelry and then hurried away, promising to send her the pawn tickets for them.

Swallowed Many Snakes.

Lewistown, Pa., Aug. 23.—Percy and Harry, small sons of A. N. Riden, a dairyman residing at High Bridge, plowed out a large copperhead snake while working in the fields. The reptile was surrounded by her brood of young ones, and as soon as disturbed the little ones ran down her throat. The boys killed the old one and took it to the house, where the father cut it open and took thirty-two young copperheads from its stomach.

A Disastrous Freight Wreck.

Altoona, Pa., Aug. 23.—A disastrous freight wreck occurred near Lilly, on the Pittsburgh division of the Pennsylvania railroad, in which four trains came to grief. Two west-bound trains met in a rear-end collision, and an eastbound train was sideswiped by cars thrown from the westbound track. Another eastbound train ran into the debris. Thirty cars and two engines were wrecked.

Burned a Witch to Death.

El Paso, Tex., Aug. 23.—Believing a witch brought on the smallpox epidemic that caused the death of many of their children, the Indians of Huejotzingo, near Puebla, Mexico, burned to death an aged woman, Juana Reulres. They barricaded all the exits of her hut, set fire to it and watched her perish in the flames.

MRS. D. I. JONES,

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. FARMERS' INSTITUTES.

Co-operation of the Grange With the Department of Agriculture.

The grange in New York state is co-operating with the work of the farmers' institutes in all ways that it can, and we presume this is true in other states. The commissioner of agriculture recently held a conference of farmers' institute conductors, every one being members of the grange. It was decided to hold county conferences during the summer and fall with representatives of the different agricultural organizations in each county, particularly the grange. At these conferences it is to be determined where in each county the farmers' institutes shall be held and what matters of general interest will be discussed. It is not proposed to decide upon locations of institutes in advance of or independently of the conferences which will be held in the different counties. Persons who wish to make such requests should take the matter up with the chief officer of some grange or other agricultural organization within the county and request that he have the claims presented at the conference.

Appreciating the importance of a proper co-operation between the grange and the institute, we asked Commissioner R. A. Pearson of the department of agriculture of New York state to outline his views on the subject. In reply he said: "The grange can and does do a great deal in the interest of our institute work. They can do still more. In the first place, the masters will be invited to attend the county conferences, and I wish that they would consider this an important engagement and not let it be broken unless absolutely necessary. At the county conferences the locations of institutes will be decided upon and to a large extent the character of the program will be determined. Then, too, I wish more of the granges would get in touch with the institute speakers and assist in developing the subjects by having good illustrative specimens at hand when the speakers arrive. Many such specimens can be used to advantage in lectures in the halls. And why should not any grange follow up the institute program at their meetings succeeding the institute, going into the subjects perhaps still further and reviewing the new points and points of most importance which were brought out at the institute?"

The institutes doubtless do best work when many people feel a personal interest in and responsibility for them. In other words, in the institute work we believe in co-operation, which is a watchword of the grange.

DAIRYMEN'S LEAGUE.

An Organization of Grangers and
Other Farmers in New York.

Orange county has for many years been noted the country over for its extensive dairy interests. When New York city authorities placed certain restrictions on the dairymen of the nearby dairy counties, restrictions they believed to be unnecessary even to attain the ends desired, these dairy farmers rebelled, not with a view to thwart the ends desired by the city authorities, but rather to attain them by a different course of procedure. So the Dairymen's league was organized. It stands for living prices, sanitary conditions, pure milk and healthy cows fed on wholesome food. Such conditions can only be brought about by organization of the farmers, that they may put their business on a paying basis so they may derive the means to employ sufficient help to bring about the sanitary stables and keep the cows in a proper state of cleanliness. They can then produce a clean and sanitary pure milk, which must be started right or it never will be right.

In the league dairies there are now 300,000 cows at least worth $12,000,000. It requires about four acres of land to support each cow, which represents an outlay of $50,000,000, and we have invested about $20,000,000 in equipment. We think this vast outlay and industry worth protecting by organization. The object of the Dairymen's league is to put the milk business on a paying basis to the producer. Until we create a financial incentive for the farmer, says the league's president, we cannot look for results satisfactory to the trade.

The West Virginia Patrons' Insurance Company.

The Grange Mutual Fire Insurance company of West Virginia was organized in 1904, beginning to do business with $100,000 worth of insurance. It now covers eight counties and is doing a $600,000 business. During the last five years there has been but one assessment, and that but $2 on the thousand. The secretary is the only officer in the company that receives compensation, and he is paid only for actual services.

FEATHERS AND EGGSHELLS.

Editorials on the great virtues of bran are frequently seen in the poultry journals. Don't follow their advice to feed bran straight. It is weakening. When using bran we never use more than one-half to the mixture.

The admission of a new breed or variety to the "standard" by the American Poultry association is no sign it will stay there. The recent drop of seven from the list by the revision committee is a pointer for the fellow who takes up every new breed.

Be not the first the new to try, But stick to the good old standby.

We lately read that a Wisconsin hen has adopted three little stray pigs. She is likely a Cochlin hen and the pigs are Cochlin-Chinas.

From a careful investigation we believe White Wyandottes the best paying proposition in poultry. They are so hot blooded as to need little heat, stand forcing for quick growth, plump up quickly and are the prettiest dressed fowls on the market. They are layers, payers and stayers.

Tree specialists are advising the mixing of flour with paris green when it is applied to trees. They claim the pests eat the mixture greedily.

But fowls eat it, too, and Leghorns go up a tree after it. We clip the grass under the tree, surround it with chicken wire and spray the poison straight when the sun is out hot, to dry quickly.

If you can't shut in those fowls when poisoning potato bugs, scatter fine feed, then spray while the sun is glaring hot, and the plants will be dried off before the fowls are through eating.

Poultry seldom eat potato bugs dead or alive. If a fowl gets a dose of paris green give it a raw egg and a tablespoonful of lard.

One of our poultry journals is rapping the judges for hurrying from the shows as soon as the judging is over. Considering some of their rank decisions, we don't wonder that they scoot. They might get the boot.

A queen bee lays from 2,500 to 3,000 eggs per day from May to August. We don't wish to accuse some fanciers who are publishing their egg records of lying. They likely keep bees and have accidentally got their bee and hen egg records mixed.

A Berks county (Pa.) farmer found a nest in his haymow that contained 135 eggs, and three others had a total of 205.

BIG PROFIT IN HENS.

Poultry Business as Viewed by a
Scientist of the Government.

That the egg industry affords an excellent opportunity for investment is the opinion of Professor Milo M. Hastings, scientific assistant animal husbandry office of the agricultural department at Washington. The best estimates available indicate that the income from poultry products is one of the four or five most important sources of the agricultural wealth of the nation. The proof of this statement is attributed to the fact that the price of eggs for the last ten or twelve years has shown not only an absolute rise, but a relative rise, when compared with the general average of values of other farm crops or food products.

One of the principal requirements generally considered is the degree of freshness. The rule, however, is sometimes variously applied. An egg forty-eight hours old that has lain in a wheat shock during a warm July rain would probably be swarming with bacteria and be absolutely unfit for food, while another egg stored eight months in a first class cold storage room would be of much better quality. For food all fresh eggs are practically equal. The tint of the yolk varies somewhat, being more yellow when green feed has been supplied the hens. The flavor of the egg is also influenced by the food given to the hen.

Particular attention is called to the loss sustained by reason of dirty eggs, broken eggs and fertile eggs exposed to heat. The loss of eggs that are actually rotten forms only about 1 to 2 per cent of the year's output.

The farmer receives 15 cents for a dozen eggs, the shipper 3/4 of a cent, freight 1 1/2 cents, receiver 1/2 cent, jobber 1 1/4 cents, candling 2 cents and gross profit to retailer 4 cents, making a dozen eggs cost the New York consumer about 25 cents.

The high price of strictly fresh eggs is counterbalanced by the price at which cold storage can be secured.

"The industry as a whole," Professor Hastings says, "is of great benefit to both the egg producer and the egg consumer. It has tended to level prices throughout the year and has resulted in a large increase in the fall and winter consumption of eggs. This means a larger total demand and a consequent increase in price."

The poultry shed shown in the illustration is a good type of house for hens that "give eggs." It has a curtain front which permits sufficient air and protects the layers. The curtains are of a length that prevent scratching of the shed. A good type of layer is shown in the picture of Plymouth Rock hen, although there are other breeds.

Keeping Cream Sweet.

If properly cooled cream will keep much longer than milk, for the reason that it contains less milk serum or food for the action of bacteria. It should be kept in a pure atmosphere so as to prevent it from taking up flavors by absorption. If cream is kept in a cellar the walls should be white-washed several times during the year. Lime is a great purifier. Never allow vegetables to remain in the same room in which cream is kept. During the daytime the cellar should be kept closed, but at night there should be thorough ventilation.

The Swiss Chard.

Swiss chard is growing in popularity. It is cultivated like the beet and is ready for use as a sort of substitute for asparagus within a few weeks after seeding. It lacks the richness of flavor of asparagus, but is a good substitute while the asparagus plantation is getting ready to bear. The long stalks are served as asparagus or as creamed celery, and the leaves may be cooked like spinach. Lucullus is the choicest variety.

HIS NARROW ESCAPE.

By JOHN C. ARMSTRONG.
[Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.]

When I was twenty-five years old I passed a crisis in my life at which I shudder today, though it happened forty years ago. For two hours I was suspended, so to speak, between a life of comfort and a prison, and the two hours ended with five minutes between life and death.

This is how it happened:

When the Union Pacific railroad was building I was taken up by one of its most influential directors with a view to preferment. The only position he could secure for me at first was paymaster, but promised if I proved worthy to do better later on. My work was to go over the line as far as completed in a pay car and pay off the employees. Well, on one of these trips I reached Julesburg, then the terminal, though Laramie was to be made the terminal in a few days. I paid off at Julesburg, having between $4,000 and $5,000 left for the force at Laramie, and I was to go there the next morning.

To kill time I went over to a hotel near the station, where I found a number of men playing poker. I sat down to watch the game and had not done so very long before I observed that none of the players seemed to know very much about the game. I had a hundred dollars of my own in my pocket besides the money I was to pay off with at Laramie. I had played poker a good deal for small stakes with my friends and was considered by them as an adept at the game. It occurred to me that I might as well take some of the money that was passing to and fro between these men, and—well, I foolishly took a hand.

I was what they were playing for, and they continued to play for me till they had got my hundred dollars. Then came the temptation to recoup with the company's money, a yielding, and the loss of nearly all of it. I knew by this time that the men were card sharps and were cheating me. But I knew also that to accuse any one of them would bring on a row that would expose me. As to fighting them with their own weapons, cheating, if I did so and was detected I would get a bullet in my brain.

A terrible situation like this doesn't usually affect one at the time as it does after it has passed. Though I have for years looked upon it with horror, at the time my feelings did not get the better of my equanimity. I presume this was because I realized that to keep my head was my only chance.

There was $4,500 in the pot, or just the amount I had lost. On the previous hand I had picked up several cards that had fallen on the floor and slipped one of them up my sleeve. I was so desperate that I resolved to cheat and if I did not win the big pot on the table let the others see that I was cheating and get a bullet in my brain. When my hand was dealt me there were two kings in it. I drew three cards, one of them being a king. The card I had picked up off the floor was a king. I had given up an ace, so no one could hold four aces. The only hand to beat four kings was a royal flush, a pretty hard hand for any one to purposely make up while being watched. If I could get in my four kings I could save myself. But what would I do with the extra card? I was desperate, as I have said, and resolved to trust to luck to get rid of it without detection. A device occurred to me. Drinks were coming on, and seeing some sandwiches on a counter waiting to be sent out to another party, I called for one of them. As soon as I had secured it I uttered an exclamation and looked fixedly through the open doorway. Every man turned his head, and I slipped my extra card into the sandwich. When the men turned I was eating bread, meat and card altogether.

I won the pot, but one of the party, looking at me fixedly, said, "Stranger, what'd you see when you sang out so suddenly just now?"

My success gave me confidence, and I kept my coolness, but I could think of nothing probable for a reply. "I thought I saw a friend of mine," I replied, "out there whom I supposed to be in Chicago."

"Are you sure you ain't got a deck up your sleeve or somewhere?"

"What do you mean?" I replied, bristling. Rising, I shook my sleeves and turned my pockets inside out, showing that no card could be concealed on my person. Then, scooping up the pot, I said:

"Gentlemen, I have been accused of cheating, and I will play no more. I am loser by about $75, so that I have a perfect right to quit."

Though I knew my life hung in the balance, nothing could equal the relief I felt as I turned squarely away and walked out of the house. They doubtless felt sure I had purposely directed their attention from myself while I cheated, but I had not been detected, and the difference was the difference between life and death.

It would be impossible to describe my feelings as I walked to my car. Horror, relief and so many other emotions were mingled that I didn't know whether I walked, staggered or flew. When I reached my car I threw myself on my bunk and shook like a leaf in the wind.

The crisis passed, I was sure never to be caught again. I was rapidly promoted, became one of the principal officers of another road and have had a successful life.
